Game: A clump of children gathers on one side of the room, while another child (the wolf) stands on the other. As the song is sung, the children dance, while the wolf acts menacing. At the end of the song, the children say, "Wolf, are you there?" The wolf can answer in one of two ways. He can say, "No," and then detail something else he is doing (going shopping, washing his hair, practicing his toboggan skills, whatever). If the wolf answers this way, the song is sung again, while the children sing and the wolf acts out his activity. Or, he can answer "Yes! And I'm coming to get you!" Then, the children try to race past him ("home"), while the wolf tries to tag as many children as possible for his dinner.
